Status:

Ready For Implementation

- This level features the Neshi's struggles with the presence of the Conclave in the Greywood

Goals:

- Create a conflict featuring the Neshi
- Introduce players to a "Defense Conflict"

Conflict Prelude:

1. A meeting occurs between Conclave leaders about diminishing supplies and the failed assaults against Lonan. Casualties and setbacks are piling up.

2. Marlow insists on looting the surrounding areas must be done in order to succeed. Ashlyn is reluctant to approve this as she doesn't wish to harm innocents. Marlow agrees with Ashlyn's sentiment but convinces her by mentioning that this area his scouts have reported about is an old abandoned battlefield. He does not mention to her that there is a Neshi village in close proximity that is occupying the site. Marlow believes sacrifices must be made if the Conclave wishes to succeed against Lonan.

3. The scene then switches to Enra and friends who have stumbled upon this very village. They enter and are surprised that it's empty. Snufflepaw calls out and it reveals the village elder.

4. Elder is surprised to see this group instead of the Conclave and tells them that they have seen them in the area and has sent his people to hide in the nearby ruins. Enra reassures the elder that she and her friends will protect them from the Conclave.

5. The player is given free-roam control. Players can explore the mostly uninhabited village for interactables and a link fragment. Players learn from exploration about the Neshi and their tendency to hoard and scavenge things.

6. Upon reaching the back-entrance of the ruins, free-roam is relinquished.

7. Enra and friends find the Neshi villagers in the center of the ruins happily playing with bones and other scavenged materials from the outskirts of the ruins.

8. Enra is relieved to see they are okay, but then notices an armed force of the Conclave approaching the ruins.

9. Enra makes her presence known at the front watchtower of the ruins and requests that the conclave stand down. She says that the Neshi are innocent and have nothing of value.

10. As some of the Conclave soldiers hesitate, Marlow recognizes Enra as the girl who took down Valmont and rallies his troops to not believe her lies and take anything of value within the ruins as this will help their injured friends and assist in the defeat of Lonan.

11. Conflict starts.

Neshi Village Free-Roam:

- Ends upon entering the ruins in the bottom left
- Contains a link fragment in the bottom-right house
- Interactables present giving info about the Neshi species and their lifestyle

Conflict writeup:

Victory Condition: Defeat Marlow
Defeat Condition: Enra Falls or Durability of Supplies is depleted

Marlow: Is an elite knight, and he is surrounded by an archer and 3 soldiers at the start of the conflict. Each one of these units do not move until the start of Wave 5 UNLESS a player unit enters their movement range. All of these units are positioned so that damaging them with Resolve will damage the boss without aggroing him.

Waves: 5 'Waves' of enemies must be dealt with by the player over the course of the conflict.

Wave 1: Tutorial wave with only Soldiers that introduces Shared Resolve

- Easily countered by kiting approaching units and or funneling them into a choke

Wave 2: Same as Wave 1 except archers are present
- Same as Wave 1 except kiting is less effective
- Players can use Xochi's taunt and Grael's smoke bomb to counter archers
- Enra should be able to attack archers from the center watchtower

Wave 3: Enemy formations are designed to counter Grael on the right side (Mystics bypass smoke bomb with aoe) and Xochi on the left (knight + brutes can overwhelm xochi with high damage)
- Players can spend turns swapping positions of Grael and Xochi
- One unit can retreat to avoid damage while Enra and the other focus down one side of the wave
- Mystics can be kited, and bursted down one at a time with Grael before they reach the choke
- Xochi with support from Enra should be able to survive with low health

Wave 4: Enemy reinforcements begin to appear from the south side of the map. They will destroy the wall on the south side of the ruins to open up a The enemy formations on all sides are less threatening than the last wave to compensate. Enemy formations are countered by Xochi (on the left) and Grael (on the right)
- Enra can mount the watchtower on the south side to deal with this new threat on the bottom side
- Enemies from the north can be defeated before the enemies on the south side breach the entrance.
- Player swaps positions of Xochi and Grael again, if they did so in Wave 3

Wave 5: Culmination of everything thrown at the player now featuring Marlow. Difficult enemy formations on all sides. Higher enemy density on the left side.
- The player can rushdown Marlow with all their units, if the player has been slowly pulling his entourage that surrounds him during the conflict.
- If the player defeated the southern reinforcements on Wave 4 without losing the southern wall, they can ignore the southern reinforcements on Wave 5
- Xochi can stall in the chokepoint if Marlow is blocked by his own units.

Conflict Events:

1. Turn 1 Player Phase: Grael mentions the size of the enemy force being large and says that numbers mean little if the soldiers are poorly trained. He says that this force could collapse under its own weight if they are not well coordinated.

2. Turn 1 Player Phase: Display guide information about Shared Resolve

3. Turn 1 Player Phase: Xochi tells Enra that she can handle the leftmost entryway to restrict enemy access to the ruins as long as she is given support. Grael says he can take the rightmost entryway

4. End of Enemy Phase after the defeat of Wave 2: Marlow sends a signal to the lone Brute in the south of the map to start attacking the southern side of the ruins
5. End of Enemy Phase after the defeat of Wave 4: Marlow says he will now be joining the seize against the ruins
